OBITUARIES

HARRY MAERKER,
66, retired deputy director of finance
for the Central Intelligence Agency who later became an internal audit supervisor for Arlington County, died Nov. 9 at a hospital in Clinton, N.C., after a heart attack. He was attending services at the First Baptist Church there while visiting a son when he was stricken.

Mr. Maerker, a resident of Annandale, retired in 1980 after 22 years with the CIA. He retired from the Arlington County post this year.

He continued to work as an accounting teacher on the adult education faculty of the University of Virginia and as an adjunct faculty member at George Washington University.

Born in Coalton, Ohio, he was a graduate of Ohio State University where he also earned a master's degree in business administration. Before moving to the Washington area in 1951 he taught accounting at Ohio State and worked for the accounting firm of Coopers & Lybrand in Detroit, where he became a certified public accountant.

Mr. Maerker worked for the Defense Department and was assistant controller at the Hot Shoppes restaurants before joining the CIA.

He attended the Federal Executive Institute in Charlottesville and the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, and he studied toward a doctorate in public administration at American University.

He was a member of the Annandale United Methodist Church.

Survivors include his wife, Ruth L., of Annandale; two daughters, Carolye R. Czechowski and Martha E. Salcetti, both of Fairfax; one son, J. Eric Maerker of Clinton; one brother, Frank, of Columbus, Ohio; one sister, Helen Zaremski of Dayton, Ohio, and two grandchildren.
